

The Status of Women in Science

Meg Urry, Yale University

Wednesday,
March 19, 2003

10:30 am - 12:00 noon

The John S. Toll Lounge
Physics Building, Rm 1204

Special Discussion:

Last Spring, Meg Urry led the U.S. Delegation of the International Union of Pure & Applied Physics' (IUPAP) International Conference on Women in Physics.

On March 19, The University of Maryland welcomes her to lead an informal discussion about the results of the conference and how to speed up the long, slow path to change.

Prof. Urry is director of the Yale Center for Astronomy and Astrophysics. She is also active with both the Committee on the status of Women in Astronomy and the APS' Committee on the Status of Women in Physics.
